DUTCH TAKING HOLLAND AGAIN ONCE WRESTED

And They Hope at No Distant Day to Build Barrier Across Zuyder Zee Entrance.

(Correspondence of Associated Press.) AMSTERDAM, Netherlands, May 12.—The tri-color of the Netherlands has been hoisted along the shores of the Zuyder Zee to celebrate the fact that "the Dutch have taken Holland"; that is, they have regained possession of most of the territory that the sea wrested from them by the disastrous floods of last January. The great breaches that were torn in the dikes have at length been securely filled in through the unremitting labor of an army of workmen, and big suction pumps driven by high-powered electric motors are pouring 3,000 cubic meters of flood water over the sea side of the embankments every minute. Working day and night it is expected they will have drained early in May most of the big inland lake that now covers some 35,000 acres of meadow, and surrounds the homes of 20,000 people in the region known as Waterland, to the north of Amsterdam. In all 200,000,000 cubic meters of seawater invaded the Netherlands during the January storm. Down to a certain level 40,000,000 cubic meters were blown by favorable winds back into the Zuyder Zee and the North sea canal, but that limit having been reached the government and provincial authorities still had a small ocean of water to remove by pumps. Regiments of workmen were first detailed to build emergency dykes at all the breached points. The method of accomplishing this was to construct rafts of large sheaves of willow twigs, firmly platted together, and when these rafts were strong enough to bear the weight of a square of workmen, they were cemented with sand and clay, and finally sunk in the gaps by tipping a load of stones on them. In places the gaps were forty feet deep. At Utdam as many as nine such layers of rafts and material had to be sunk before the breaches were filled up.

While the repair of the dikes was in progress miles of electric cable were laid to Monnikendam and Utdam where enormous centrifugal pumps were late mounted, and the country was scoured for motors powerful enough to drive the latter, for it was out of the question to obtain such motors from abroad at the time. At Utdam is the largest of the pumps, which has three huge pipes, together swallowing a thousand cubic meters of water a minute. At numerous other places there are smaller pumps, with an aggregate of 1,120 horsepower, removing 3,000 cubic meters of water a minute. Early in May the north Holland countryside, that is the higher situated land, will have been thoroughly drained, though the "polders" or basins, calculated to hold 45,000,000 cubic meters of water will have to be each separately drained, and for this purpose a dozen different pumping stations have been established. The removing of the water by no means repairs the flood's effect. There are upwards of 2,500 homesteads and other buildings that will have to be rebuilt and repaired and there is the more serious fact that the whole of this agricultural land will have been saturated with salt by the sea water. Opinions differ as to the length of time it will take to get rid of the salt; but much ground will yield no crop this year, and it is certain that the salt will not have been washed away in its entirety for a long time to come. It is likely that the costly experience will stimulate the Dutchman's ardor to tackle, when the war is over, the great scheme of building a barrier right across the entrance of the Zuyder Zee itself, and so creating a new twelfth province for Queen Wilhelmina's realm.
